OUR NEUTRALITY

If it was not so serious it would be laughable to consider the attitude of this country toward the European war.

Washington told American residents and property owners in Mexico to come out as this government could do nothing to protect them because of the internal strife in Mexico. Nothing of importance has been done to protect the lives or property of Americans in Mexico and there is little indication that much will be done.

Instead of warning our people to keep off of the ships of the warring nations in Europe, Washington now pretends to police the world and demands that one of the nations shall cease the use of submarines, when its national existence depends upon what it can do with that arm of its offensive and defensive service.

The man who is directing these conditions issued a very strong manifesto to the people urging strict neutrality on our part when the European war broke out. He even urged that the people decline to discuss the question to prevent us from deviating from a strictly neutral course. No one now even pretends that the man who issued that manifesto—President Woodrow Wilson—is neutral or has ever been so. He and his entire cabinet are intensely anti-German and have been all the time. Yet they prate about neutrality. It is disgusting to say the least.

This country has been the worst enemy Germany has had because of the kind of "neutrality" we have practiced. If the country wants to be against Germany let's say it and say it boldly and above board; let's cease to be two-faced. Honesty and frankness are best for nations as well as for people.

It is very much to the credit of Great Britain that as a government it has always been in the forefront in the matter of administering justice that was free from the obstruction of technicalities. More than any other nation Britain has sought to know the unvarnished truth in the courts of justice and the verbiage of ambiguity and obstructive technicalities has been swept aside as not being for the benefit or conducive to the administration of justice.

In contradistinction to some other countries—our own not entirely excluded—they have felt and acted on the policy, very largely, that the route to the truth in its naked simplicity has been the logical course for the best interest of the people.

Britain has recently gone a step farther and instituted reforms in the manner of drawing an indictment that practically sweeps away the legal technicalities upon which so many lawyers rely when truth and justice is against them. The new form of indictment for murder is: "Statement of offense: Murder. Particulars of offense: A. B., on the — day of —, in the county of —, murdered J. S." Could anything be more simple or to the point so far as justice goes? It is a hard blow to the technical lawyer who relies on tricks and chicanery for success. It might well be copied into the statutes of this country.

The movement for a constitutional convention should have the hearty support of the press and the people of the state. It will be the duty and privilege of the voters to express their will on the subject at the August election.

SAVES DAUGHTER

Advice of Mother no Doubt Prevents Daughter's Untimely End.

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months."

I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles.

Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health."

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, get a bottle of Cardui today. Delay is dangerous. We know it will help you, for it has helped so many thousands of other weak women in the past 50 years.

now living is the revamped instrument of 1834. Practically all the important changes that were made by the convention of 1870 were such as the abolition of slavery rendered necessary.

We are not living in the time of 1834 nor 1870, for that reason the old constitution does not suit our present conditions. It is holding back the progress of the state in a way that is placing a heavy burden on us as a people and marks us as backward and non-progressive.

Some of the most able men of our nation have agreed that most states should have a constitutional revision not less often than once in fifteen years. Ours is forty-six years old and according to the most advanced views should have been revised three times within the period of its existence.

Congressman John A. Moon, of the third district, has made the statement that in his opinion there is not a single man in congress who would at this time vote for war with Germany. Let us hope he has sensed the situation correctly.

PUBLIC SCHOOL

Two Evenings Occupied With Splendid Exercises by 200 Pupils.

Thursday night the first, second, third and fourth grades gave a highly creditable entertainment consisting of songs, drills and dialogues. The costumes were excellent and rendered the exercises particularly attractive by their happy appropriateness.

Friday night the sixth and seventh grades entertained a crowded house with an operetta and a patriotic piece called the "Stars and Stripes Jubilee." Both evenings were pronounced most excellent and some persons went so far as to say it was the best they had ever seen anywhere. Of the more than 200 pupils all had a part and because of the crowded conditions it was difficult to carry out the program with as much promptness and dispatch as was desired, but so interested was the audience that they waited eagerly and with patience for each succeeding number.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Cure that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
